following message to Congress; "To the Congress: In my annual message, addressed to the Congress on the 3d instant, I called attention to the pending boundary controversy between Great Britain and the Republic of Venezuela, and recited the substance of a representation made by this government to her Britannic Majesty's government suggesting reasons why such dispute should be submitted to arbitration for settlement and inquiring whether it would be submitted. The answer of the British Government, which was then awaited, has since been received, and, together with the dispatch, to which it is a reply,

"Assuming, however, that the attitude of Venezuela will remain unchanged the dispute has reached such a stage as to make it now incumbent upon the United States to take measure to determine with sufficient certainty for its justification what is the true divisional line between the Republic of Venezuela and British Guiana. The inquiry to that end should, of course, conducted carefully and judicially, and due weight should be given to all available evidence, records and facts in

A COMMISSION RECOMMENDED. "In order that such an examination should be prosecuted in a thorough and satisfactory manner, I suggest that the Congress make an adequate appropriation for the expenses of a commission to be appointed by the Executive, who shall make the necessary investigation and report upon the matter with the least possible delay. When such report is made and accepted it will, in my opinion, be the duty of the United States to resist by every means in its power as a wilful aggression upon its rights and interests the appropriation by reat Britain of any lands or the exercise of governmental jurisdiction over any territory which after investigation we have determined to rightfully

The one infallible barometer of the growth of industries in this country is found in the records of our great transportation lines. Their reports of the condition of American industries are infallible. An official of the Pennsylvania Railroad recently speaking of the difference in railway traffic since one year ago, said that on the 1st of December 1894, that company had 18,000 cars stowed away in sheds because not wanted while to-day they are not only using every car they own, but could use over 30,000 more cars than they have at their command. When asked whether it was not possible to obtain cars from other railways to bridge over the emergency, the answer was that every other railroad of the country has use for more cars than it now possesses. Such is the record of our present industries as written by the only safe barometer of usiness and trade. Of course this immense volume of trade of our railroads does not mean the large profits commanded from a pressure of traffic some years ago. Not only the railroads, but every other industry and enterprise of the continent has passed to new conditions greatly reducing the price of almost everything Our newspapers are published at half the price they commanded a decade ago, and yet are better and even more profitable than they were then. Our railways have reduced fares and freight to a minimum. and yet all properly organized transtheir shareholders.

Here is a Christmas story that has been told the little children in Germany for many hundreds of years:

'Twas the night before Christmas.

A little child was wandering all alone through the streets of a great city. People were hurrying hither and thither. and express wagons were being rattled through the streets. Even the snowdakes seemed happy with the expectation of the coming Christmas morning.

But the little child seemed to have no home and wandered on from street

He soon reached the end of the street and went straight up to the window from which the light was streaming.

The little wanderer crept closer and closer to the window pane. So sweet keep any one waiting in the storm."

The mother put her arms around the strange child and drew him close to her. She sat beside the fire with the little one on her knee, and her own two little ones warmed his half frozen hands and, bending low over his head, kissed the ittle wanderer's brow. They gave him the bowl of bread and milk that had been put away for their own breakfast, and when he had eaten it the little girl said, "Now let us light the Christmas tree and share our presents with this little child."

Fifty Years in Poultry Raising. The history of thoroughbred poultry in the United States is almost wholly in cluded within the past fifty years. Fowls there were prior to that time, but they were a mottey crowd, with little attempt at breeding for specific points. As early as 1935 the Leghorn was introduced into the country, but this fowl was soon bred promiscuously with the common stock. and its special characteristics were lost. It was not until the introduction of the Asiatic fowls, the Cochins, and the Brahmas, that anything like careful oreeding cî soultry was begun. About 1845 the Cochins appeared, and then great size and strange appearance awakened a special interest in poultryraising. In 1847 came the Brahmas, and in 1852 and 1853 the Brown Leghorns, then called Red Leghorns, from the color of the male bird. The introduction of the Asiatic fowls was the cause of that strange physical phenomenon, known as the 'hen fever," which George P Burnham admirably ridiculed in his "History of the Hen Fever," greatly, it is said, to his pecumary advantage The book sold as rapidly as the fowls had previously sold, and Mr Burnham made two fortunes, one out of the fowls and one out of the book But this craze passed, and there was a period of comparatively little interest in poultry The craze, however, had left some permanent benefits, for the Asiatic blood was good strong blood, and by its introduction the common stock of the country had been greatly increased in weight and in profitable character Those early Asiatics were not the finished productions of to day, but were longer in hmb and gaunter in build than the modern fowls of the same class They were prized especially for their size, and it was the boast of many a breeder that he had a rooster that could eat corn off from the top of a flour barrel They were also really good layers of eggs remarkable in size. One enthusiastic writer of that time reported that they usually land two eggs dank, and sometimes three, and, strange as it may seem to us, this report was believed by not a few. But carefully kept records proved them to be prohibe layers, surpassing many of the other then known breeds The introduction of the Leghorns re-awoke the slumbering enthusiasm for poultry, and then remarkable egg records seemed to be a perfect justification for this re-awakening Mr Charles R Harker wrote a little book on the Leghorn, Mr. H H Stoddard did the same, and Mr. F H Avers made a journey to Italy for the express purpose of importing Leghorns, and, on his return to this country, published, under the title "The Quest of the Leghern," a graphic account of his journey and of the fowls he saw abroad. In 1572 specimens of the Brown Leghorn were sent to Eugland, and won namediate favor, Mr. Lewis Wright paying them a handsome tribute in his illustrated work on poultry. In 1555 occurred the "Lord importation" of White Leghorns, if these fowls were really White Leghorns. It is said they had white legs, and it is possible they were Minorcas, and not Leghorns. But in 1863 the "Stetson" birds arrived, and these had yellow legs and white plumage, and were, unquestionably, White Leg-From 1861 until 1865, owing to the Civil War, the interest in poultry declined, but, when the war was over, the breeding of thoroughbred fowls was taken up with renewed vigor, and it has known no deminution of interest since then. About 1879 appeared the Plymouth Rock a fowl of cross-bred origin which took a name already made for by Dr. Bennett's extinct Plymouth Rock, produced, as he stated, by crossing a Cochin China cock and a hen which was a cross of fawn-colored Dorking, Malay, and wild India fowl The modern Plymouth Rock was of very different origin, having been produced by a cross of the Dominique and the Java. Not long after this appeared the Wyandotte which was, unquestionably, the result of complicated crosses, and which was formally recognized as a distinct breed by the American Poultry Association, in 1983, although it had asked for admission six years prior to that time The Plymouth Rock has been differentiated into four varieties, the Barred single combed, Barred pea combed, White single-combed, and White pea-combed The Wyandotte has also diverged into varieties, there being now the Silver, the Golden, the White, the Black, and a Buff well under way. The last ten years of poultry-breeding in this country have been characterized especially by the production and introduction of new varieties and breeds Not only have the Plymouth Rock and the Wyandotte been split up into numerous varieties, but Reccaps, Minorcas, Indian Games, Buff Leghorns, and other varieties, have been unported from foreign countries, and there are now numerous breeds, or varieties partially made which, in the course of a year or two, will be introduced to public notice. And what is true of the larger fewls is also true of the Bantams, numerous new varieties having been made or imported Fifty years ago there were very few distinct breeds of fowls in this country to-day there are not less than one hundred. Fifty years ago there were no fixed standards for breeds, always except ing the Hamburg fowl, to-day there are carefully-prepared standards for the numerous breeds and varieties. Fifty years ago the fowls were bred promiscuously, and their specific characteristics were very uncertain, to-day they are bred with intelligent care, and their characteristics, even to the shade and marking of a feather, are definitely fixed. Fifty jears ago there were practically no breeders of thoroughbred fowls in this country to-day their name is legion.

This great change has not come by chance, but can be traced to definite causes. The "hen-fever" has already been alluded to as one cause. This, by calling attention to the fact that fowls were profitable, and that in them was a intherto neglected source of meome, was perhaps, the chief causa, but it was supplemented by others The poultry exhibition, by collecting the various kinds of plemented by others The poultry exhibition, by collecting the various kinds of fowls together, afforded the public an opportunity to study their characteristics, and stimulated the desire to possess either the most beautiful or the most profitable varieties. The poultry press (both those publications devoted exclusively to poultry, and those which had a department in which poultry matters were discussed) fostered the nascent industry. The American Poultry Association, an organization of the leading poultry breeders of the country, enough the standard, directed the growth of this industry. And the application of artificial methods to the hatching and rearie; of poultry made possible a distinct branch of the business and widened its scope. Without the incubator and broader, the broiler business could not have existed, for this business requires chickens when broody hens are not to be bad in sufficient numbers. All these rauses have united to make poultry one of the great industries of the country, a source of national wealth, a partial means of income to thousands, and the total support of not a few. And all before the form of the first ways to thousands, and the total support of not a few. And all before it is approach of fifty years.—ILS BARCOCK, in the American Agricultures?

That fraid through the stands of the point of the year of the proper of the country when the proper of the country.

Very often Nature needs only a little help to get over an obstruction. When a boom of logs is floating down a river, all goes well until one single log strikes something and stocks. Then there is a "jam"—and trouble. It is just so in the progress of food through the digestive organs. Everything goes well full something sticks. Then the process of digestion stops. That's indigestion. Unless the impediment is removed poisonous putrid matter begins to accumulate There's a "jam"—constipation, and trouble. Sick headache, blinousness, sleeplessness vertigo, heartburn, loss of sleeplessness vertigo, bearburn, loss of appetite—these are some of the symptoms. Just a little help at the appearance of the first one would end the trouble. Nature is a hard worker, but she needs assistance if too much be put upon her.

upon her
Dr Pierce's Pleasant Pellets offer the best and simplest method for furnishing this assist nee They are prompt and very effective in their action, but they very effective in their action, but they are not strong nor severe. They cause no violent wreuch of the system. They go right to the 'log" that is fast and loosen it. Nature does the rest. By and by, with a little care in detting, Nature will do it all. That's one great advantage of the "Pleasant Pellets 'over the many strongly cathartic pills—you do not become a slave to their use. They really care the trouble they are meant to cure. Even the worst kind of chronic really cure the trouble they are meant to cure. Even the worst kind of chrome constipation disappears with their use.

Of Benefit to Farmers. The Agricultural Chautauqua Circle Ex pected to Greatly And the Grangues

The Department of Agriculture of the State reports that forty-five Farm ers' Institutes have already been held and that there will be in all a total of 160 They will continue up to the secand Caps, Paints and Oils, and thing done is the institution of an ond week in April. The most importentirely new feature—an agricultural

Chautauqua reading circle, under the direct supervision of the Pennsylvania

State College
Colonel John A Woodward will have the personal direction of it. A course of agricultural and scientific reading of ractical use to farmers has been marked out for them to read, and if they have any questions to ask relative to their work as farmers these questions are to be sent direct to the State College. There they will be answered by specialists of the first ability, and thus the State College will be made of pracfacal working value to every farmer in

There are no fees connected with this circle, and it is thought that the idea will accrue to more real benefit to the rural population and hence to the State at large than anything that has been proposed for many years

MARKEIOLS RESLITS — From a letter written by Rev J Gunderman, of Dimon dale, Much, we are permitted to make this extract. "I have no besitation in recommending Dr King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marticleus in the case of int wife. While I was pretor of the Briptst Church an Rives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonna succeeding La Grippe. Terrible priovysins of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr King's New Discovery it was quick in its work and highly eatisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Hibber's Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.1
